G. W. AND BILL NYE

The Immortal Washington Sees New York in the Company of Faithful William.

Causual Visits to the Postoffice and Other Points of Interest-A Shad Story

Reflections at the Opera-Between the Acts-An Unexpected and Startling Climax.

Bill Nye in the New York World: "Good morning," said a tall, erect voice yesterday as the proprietor stepped severely from a craft that looked some like a stone boat and some like a foundered gondola looking for a veterinary surgeon. The tall gentleman, as he got out of his boat and moored it to a stone hitching-post at the Battery, looked like Washington just after he had crossed the Delaware and tied his barge to a tree, and his face had such a general, postage-stamp of countenance that I said, "Excuse me, sir, but you look enough like the Father of his Country to fool your entire family. May I inquire," I pursued in a cultivated manner, "what your name is?" a cultivated manner, "what your name is?"

"You have guessed my identity at once, young man," he said. "I am indeed the Father of his Country. I addressed you because I desired to ask where I would be apt to find Col. Thomas P. Ochiltree."

"He most always puts up at the Hoffman House, General," I said, removing my hat, "and as the sky seems to have a lurid appearance in that direction I judge that he is now there."

"And, sir, in the meantime, what might be the best method of reaching that places Things are so changed since I was last

"We may go via the Broadway cars if we can flag one of them, or we can take the Sixth Avenue Elevated road to 'Twenthe Sixth Avenue Elevated road to 'I wenty-third Street,' as the guards calls it, or we can call a keb—have a keb—keb?
or we can walk. Eyether of those ways will take us to the Hoffman Ho.se, if persisted in. I speak of walking because it will afford you a chance to see some of the changes that have taken place since you changes that have taken place since you went away."

"Very well, then, I will be glad to walk if you will attend me, and we will note some of the points of interest."

At first I could hardly realize that I was talking with the Parent of His country on its father's side, but soon my good breeding and natural refinement of manner began to assert themselves, and I was less rattled as we went along. We walked up Broadway slowly, reading the signs as we went, and I pointed out to him the objects of interest, answering his questions cheerfully whether I knew anything about them of not. I showed him the Western Union building, and told him all about Mr. them of not. I showed him the Western Union building, and told him all about Mr. Gould, and offered to give him a letter of introduction to him if he desired it. Then we went into the postoffice and I told him how easy it was to get a money order there, and how difficult it was to get the money on one in the case like his own. Now, for instance, you come in here tomorrow with the money order and you say "My name is Washington—George Washington—and I desire to cash a money order which I have just received from home." The man says, "You will have to identify yourself, there are so many Washingtons. The woods are full of Washingtons, and half of them are named George. The other half are Martha." You squirm around and feel the cold perspiration coursing and half are Martha." I ou squirm around and feel the cold perspiration coursing and babbling down your spine, and reluctantly you take a newspaper out of your pocket and seek to identify yourself by meaus of a picture, made by McDougali perhaps, and the man at the window says, "you did stand some show before. Now you have injured yourself," You will have to get several good citizens of New York to prove that this is your picture."

prove that this is your picture."
"Perhaps you would like to see McDougall?" I exclaimed. "We can go over across the street and see him in the act of resting, elevator, but there was a new intellectual giant in charge of the lift, and as both Washington and I had been away from the Washington and I had been away from the office for some time no one knew us, and so we had to fill out an application and get it acknowledged before a notary public ere we could get into the elevator. The boy then told us that the elevator did not run on Sundays. We then trudged up the stairs, but after we had climbed several flights we found a door which was locked on the upper side and so arranged that one could come down, but nobody could go up. "It is always so in the world." said the general. "Men are ever ready to show one the way down stairs, but how many of us, even professed Christians, will bar the door that leads one upward, so that unless we have the night key or orthodoxy in our pockets, our name, as I may say, sir, is Dennis."

So we could not see Mr. McDougail even

Dennis."
So we could not see Mr. McDougail even in slumber. We could only hear him.
We looked at the circulation beoks and the large presses, then we went into the back room where the workmen were engaged in putting shawl-straps on the Sunday papers. Afterwards we went up to the Brooklyn bridge.

My companion was greatly overcome. He

My companion was greatly overcome. He stood with his hat in his hand for some time looking down over the shipping in the East river and the bay, across the roofs of the city away to the eastward where the mellow music of the church bells came like melodious breakers on the silent shore of melodious breakers on the silent shore of the peaceful Sabbath.

Now and then a well-dressed Brooklyn man came by us on his way to St. Thomas' justly celebrated church, or a New Yorker went the other way to hear Dr. Talmage. Then again a bridge jumper would pass us on his way to his daily toil; then looking over the rail to see that he was not in danger of mussing up the shipping, he would leap from the structure and disappear with a cunning little plunk.

"Time has sped no faster than the double

Time has sped no faster than the double "Time has sped no faster than the double quick march of improvement," I heard the white-haired man say reverently. "To meet every great exigency God has put it into the heart and brain of man to enter the realms of what other ages regarded as the mysterious. The courage that swelled the hearts of those who fought for you in the war of the revolution now lights the eye of the inventor and the scientist. Peace hath her victories no less than war. The mighty statue guardless than war. The mighty statue guard-ing your harbor and lighting the returning American to his peaceful home under the old flag, now more starry and beautiful than ever before, is not only and everlasting symbol of liberty tendered by one great nation to another, but it is a monument to the enterpirse, the courage and the devotion of the invent r who has caught the dangerous light from the temperature. devotion of the invent r who has caught the dangerous light from the tempest and taught it to trim the torch of liberty." He watched the Elevated trains go out. We then went to the Tombs police medicine plain. He went to bed sassy and powerful. He awoke penniless, trembly and depressed. Last night it required two policemen to head the procession and display which he considered himself. Now a little child could have taken him 'y the plum-colored bugle and led him away to a quiet grave. I introduced him to a hero of the gory base ball field having a mattress for a breastplate.

"Everything has changed in New York since I lived here, except the quality of the rum," said the solemn man by my side.

"The rum here was always good for cleaning windows. Let us pass on."

Softly we stole out through the portal through which so many had stolen their way in, and going over to Broadway I stopped a car by placing a telegraph pole across the track. We then got aboard and rode up to Fifth avenue. I showed my companion Delmonico's eating house and looked at my watch, but he did not say anything, so we passed on.

"That report about me getting hot over a

anything, so we passed on.
"That report about me getting hot over a $2 shad that was bought by my servants while I lived here is incorrect," he said while I lived here is incorrect," he said earnestly.

"And how did you know of the report?"
"Why, I subscribe to a New York bureau of press clippings, which keeps me informed. I knew that during the centennial my name might appear in the papers more or less, and so I get everything of the kind, thus keeping myself well posted as to the esteem in which I am held. It is stated that I was goaded by the severe criticisms of the press regarding my extravagance, and so when I found that the shad cost $2 I ordered it out of the room. Such was not exactly the case, and if you will set me right on the matter I will be glad to do as much for you at any time. The shad was, indeed, $2, but that would have made no difference to me. However, it was too gamey and asserted itself, I thought, in a way that left the president of the United States entirely in the shade. So I order d it off the table, but whatevar it cost, $2 or $20, made no difference, for after the way we lived at Valley Evers I would allow as states entirely in the shade. So I ordered it off the table, but whatevar it cost, $2 or $20, made no difference, for after the way we lived at Valley Forge I would allow no peace loving, paste-eating enemy of the gov-rnment, who allowed his lower-case 'fs' to get into the 's' box, to tell me what I should eat. That's the kind of a president I was, and I gave good satisfaction, too."

After a plain dinner of horse dovers, patties De Foy grass, ragoots, saddle of Weish rabbits, breast of dodo, with accordion plaitings, Pomme de Terror, dofunny glace and kafey o'Lay, washed down with Cincinnati sec, with essence of Old Virginia tobacco and cob pipes, we attended the sacred remarks of Faust, and Faust is a singing play with sad and soarching passages in it. It was quite in contrast with the sacred concert of 100 years ago, which was opened with prayer and a steel tuning fork. Gen. Washington declined a box and we sat near the aisle, and a steel tuning fork. Gen. Washington declined a box and we sat near the aisle, where people could walk over us in going out between the acts to get their breath. A great many people went out to get their breathe and got it. In many instances I think they would have done themselves no great injury if they had been unsuccessful. If I could not go out for five minutes and get a better style of breath than most of them did I would have retained my seat and the respect of those who sat near me.

As we went out I heard Gen. Washington say: "I would like to stay over tomorrow and meet my various relatives who will be in town. I would also like to get a front seat at the Metropolitan opera house where I could see the presidential party eat. Three dollars is none too much to pay for seeing a president eat, especially if one has a powerful glass. I would also like to be here and see the mass meeting of those whose grandmothers jilted me. From press clippings furnished me by the bureau lase that when I was not engaged in slow. press clippings furnished me by the bureau I see that when I was not engaged in slum-

I see that when I was not engaged in slumbering in a continental house in a new place or establishing a headquarters in a new place, I was being jilted by some longwaisted girl.

"But I must not tarry, for I see by my buil's-eye watch that by the time I get back to the Battery it will be midnight, and I am then due elsewhere, as you must know." Just then a gentleman from the dangerous ward of the asylum ran his arm througe George's and steered him to an ambulance which stood at the door. I could hear the father of his country whoop and but his head against the interior as he rode away.

This is the second time I have been This is the second time I have been fooled that way. He raid he would be glad especially to see the artist McDougall in a state of repose; also to get in a little personal send-off which would keep his name before the people, and besides to hear the angry waves break over the high-water mark of our circulation.

We went in and sauntered back to the elevator, but there was a new intellectual giant in charge of the lift, and as both

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morrfs, Newark, Ark., says, "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an incurable consumptive Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle, and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

The skin absorbs it. Sold by R. S. Hale & Co., wholesale and retail agents, Helena.

Is the people will not, can not, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world-wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfac-tion at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfac-tion for purifying the blood as Beggs' Blood Purifier & Blood Maker, and every bottle that does not do its work will cost you nothing. We then went to the Tombs police court.

The court was engaged in making the bark fly and there was no time for demurrer, rebuttals, sur-rebuttals, r-joinder, or sur-rejoinder. There was no argument upon the ruling of the court, or motions to set aside the judgement or reopen the case. In the language of Justinian the defendant was required absolutely and without argument, to fish, cut bait or go ashore.
